Dear Joe:

Our current list of 20 largest shareholders was compiled on August 29, 2008. This is a required disclosure in our Annual Report under the Australian Corporations Act 2001, Section 671B.

One of the listing requirements within Australia is that companies and individuals are required to lodge a Notice of Substantial Shareholding where they hold more than 5% of the voting rights and relevant interests within a listed company. They are required to update that notification for subsequent changes of 1% in their holdings. The listing of the 20 largest shareholders includes three custodian entities which hold shares on behalf of investors. They are:

National Nominees Limited	9.62%
Cogent Nominees Pty Limited	9.39%
JP Morgan Nominees Australia Limited	8.70%

The fact they have not lodged Substantial Shareholder notices is evidence of the fact that they do not have control of the voting rights of those shares. They hold the shares on behalf of a number of investors. In the case of JP Morgan, we understand they hold a large number of shares on behalf of Renaissance. Similarly Hunter Hall shares are largely held by Cogent Nominees as nominee.

In our previous discussions with the City of Chicago Procurement Officer and the City Attorney, we established that we only need an EDS on beneficial, not relevant interest holdings. Accordingly there is no requirement for an EDS on these three entities. If we exclude these entities there are only three investors who have filed Substantial Shareholder notices. They are:

Renaissance Smaller Companies Pty Ltd	11.13%
Thorney Holdings Pty Limited	7.47%
Hunter Hall Investment Management Limited	6.98%

The Thorney structure has been proven to be broken down into 2 separate discretionary trusts and is now below the 7.5% level for the EDS anyway.

The Hunter Hall Investment limited Group has filed a Notice of Change of Interests of a Substantial Shareholder on 9 September 2008 taking them up to an 8.37% holding. Hunter Hall is also a listed public company in Australia and as such has a significant number of shareholders. Their holding is spread across a number of funds, none of which hold more than 7.5% of voting shares on issue. I have attached a copy of their filing to evidence this.

With regard to the Renaissance smaller companies Pty Limited Holdings we previously established that Renaissance is a fund manager who invests in equities on behalf of the larger superannuation funds in Australia. They are allocated pools of funds to invest and manage on behalf of a number of funds. I have attached a copy of the company profile showing their investment philosophy to demonstrate there is no direct beneficial interest for any one individual. I believe this is the same website address given to the City for review as part of our telephone conference call last time. They accepted this last time and apart from an increased holding nothing has changed from those previous representations. Accordingly, I don't believe there is a requirement for any of these entities to complete an EDS.

I would be happy to be available for a conference call with the City if they would like.

Best Regards,
